

An overview of this document – How it was produced

This is an electronic version of a book created by Joe Lineberger in 1985. The project to convert his fine work came about by pure chance and coincidence.

I happened to meet Lee Lineberger on a casual basis while enjoying the sunsets over a few adult beverages at the Skull Creek Boathouse on Hilton Head. We had known each other for over a year when I mentioned that I was born in Savannah and was a Salzburger. He said he was also.

I have a name in my family, James Harmon Heidt, and Lee said there was a James Harmon Lineberger in his family background. And he had a book on the Lineberger family. That hooked me and I began converting the book to this form, partially to see if we had a family connection but primarily to publish this information to the Lineberger family and Salzburgers in general.

Joe Lineberger has given limited rights to use this converted book under the restrictions that it not be used for commercial purposes. He retains copyrights to the book and to this media.

Now, a word about the conversion process. I have scanned the book and used an OCR process to convert the text to this format. This allows the book to be indexed and searched. The intent is to put this information on a web site for all to see and to make it searchable via Google and other search engines.

The process took many weeks of effort. Every page was converted to text and formatted into Word. Every page was visually checked for errors in the scanning process and errors were found on every page, due to the scanning and OCR process.

Every known error has been corrected and I know of no errors in this document – but surely there are a few. If you see something that might be wrong, it could be in the conversion process.

Enjoy...
